Medicine

The Warren Alpert Medical School at Brown University announces the availability of a three-year academic Fellowship Program in Child Abuse Pediatrics.
The fellowship is offered in partnership with Hasbro Children's Hospital in Providence, Rhode Island.
The program aims to train pediatricians to become medical experts, knowledgeable and competent in all areas of child abuse and neglect, including physical abuse, sexual abuse, neglect (supervisional, medical, and physical), psychological abuse and neglect, and medical child abuse (factitious illness by proxy). The fellowship is directed at training physicians who will primarily pursue careers in academic settings as clinicians, researchers, and teachers.
